Industry-Leading Web-Filtering Product Wins Major Consumer Safety Award

iParenting Media Awards Gives Top Honors to Phantom Technologies' iBoss Home Parental Control

SAN DIEGO—Phantom Technologies, maker of the innovative iBoss line of Internet-filtering devices, is proud to announce that its iBoss Home Parental Control has won a prestigious iParenting Media Award for the 2008 Greatest Products Call in the category of Safety. Selected from thousands of entries following extensive testing by one of the world's premier product evaluation services, the iBoss Home Parental Control was distinguished for its easy-to-use, all-in-one solution for protecting children from online dangers.

A Disney Internet Group media property, iParenting.com is a leading resource for parents seeking tips on how to ensure their children's health and well-being. Its iParenting Media Awards provides a highly credible and objective method for determining the best products in the marketplace — in this case, home safety — honoring them with the most prestigious consumer award. The thousands of products it receives each year for review are all subjected to the only internationally certified product evaluation system in the parenting awards industry, which is audited by an objective third party to guarantee compliance.

In addition to the iParenting Media Award, the iBoss Home Parental Control has previously garnered multiple awards for its intuitive interface, powerful Web 2.0 filters, and ease of use. As the best-selling Internet parental control product that doesn't require software, it incorporates a built-in router, firewall, and wireless capabilities to work seamlessly with the entire home network, replacing the need to purchase, install, and manage separate software for each computer in the home, saving time and money.

“Not only does this product block websites, it does much more. We appreciated the monitoring feature to see where violations might be and the time limits that can be placed,” commented one iParenting Media reviewer. “This product is great. I love the detailed reports it has so I can track where and who my kids are talking to. This makes the computer time for the kids more enjoyable so that they can go places and not worry,” remarked a second iParenting Media reviewer.

“It is a special honor to be recognized by such a prominent consumer advocacy service,” says Phantom Technologies CEO Paul Martini. “To win an iParenting Media Award in the Safety category demonstrates that the iBoss Home Parental Control is effective and easy-to-use for the people who matter most: the parents who are trying to protect their children against the wide range of threats posed by the Internet.”

Phantom Technologies’ line of iBoss Web filters offer the only software-free solution to cover all markets, including home, small- to medium-sized business, corporate, education, and government. With multiple patents pending, iBoss Web filters continue to lead the way in innovative Internet-filtering technology. Visit www.ibosswebfilters.com.
